Instruction in Music Aids Many Asylum Patients

Roseltha Nesheim Develops Orchestra as New Medium for Treatment of Insane. Patients in the Fergus Falls hospital for the insane developed an orchestra which in its final concert this spring, presented such numbers as the William Tell overture. Through the medium of music as a supplement to general good care, several have left the hospital declared cured.

Miss Roseltha Nesheim of Moorhead, who has been directing musical work at the hospital for the past two years, discovered that many of the patients owned instruments and were willing and eager after the first few times, to receive instruction. Many of them have shown talent which has been buried since their illness, gradually returning under supervision. The orchestra was named Little Symphony and presented three concerts during the winter and spring, giving up activities during the summer. Miss Nesheim also teaches art and music in Battle Lake, Underwood and Breckenridge.
