REGULAR LICENSE BLANKS REQUIRED

FAULTY APPLICATIONS FOR DRIVERS' PERMITS EXPENSIVE TO STATE.

St. Paul, Feb. 20. — Considerable additional expense is being caused the drivers' license division of the state highway department by persons who send in their applications by mail, according to Gil Carmichael, director of the division.

Many of the applicants simply send in 25 cents with a request for a license, and fail to send in the regular blank containing necessary information as to the applicant. No license can be issued without a regular application, he said.

Other applicants so fold or roll their applications that the numbering and postage metering machines. All applications should be mailed flat. Expense to the department is increased by the large number who fail to affix sufficient postage on their letters and applications, he declared.

"It is much more satisfactory for applicants to turn in their applications to their county clerk of district court," Mr. Carmichael said. "When it is impossible to do this, we will receive the applications by mail, but we must insist that the regular forms be used, that they be mailed flat, and that sufficient postage be affixed."

TRADE TENSION THREATENS WAR

WALLACE MAKES PLEA TO AMERICANS TO MAKE UP MINDS ON PRODUCTION.

Washington, Feb. 20. (UP)—Foreign countries embarked upon international trade policies similar to those of the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover administrations are creating world-wide tension which many persons believe will lead to war, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said in a pamphlet written for the Foreign Policy association. The statement was made in a plea to the American people to make up their minds what they want to do about their own industrial and agricultural production.

The implied rebuke to recent republican administrations is the latest blow dealt the old deal by the new. Wallace said many persons believe the current pressure will be bound to blow itself off in another orgy of human killing." He said there was no surer path to war than to insist upon selling while refusing to buy abroad. The secretary outlined three choices of policy for the United States:

1. Economic self-containment, ending agricultural exports involving permanent retirement from production of from 40,000,000 to 100,000,000 acres and requiring the movement of millions of farmers from the south's cotton belt.

2. Economic internationalism, requiring major tariff reductions, curtailment of some industries and retirement of others and a huge increase ($1,000,000,000 over 1929) in American imports.

3. A planned middle course embracing modifications of both foregoing policies.

"A clean-out program of planned international trade or barter would be far less likely to get us into war, I think," Wallace wrote. "than the attempts to function internationally as sellers, yet nationally as buyers, inaugurated under Presidents Harding and Coolidge and followed by President Hoover. Such tactics pursued in the past by other nations led to bloody foreclosure proceedings at the point of guns."

"Not dissimilar current programs in other countries have created a dangerous degree of tension throughout the civilized world, and there are many who think that sooner or later the pressure will be bound to blow itself off in another orgy of human killing."

"Straight, cool-headed thinking about the sort of economic warfare which is followed by actual warfare was never more needed than now. This time, it would seem, it is nationalist pressure that is heading us toward the abyss. The last time, it was supposed to be international pressures, expressed in dreams and deeds of imperialism, intricately bound up with foreign loans."

"It comes to this: If we insist upon selling without buying, we have to lend our surplus to foreign countries and never take it back. . . . There is no surer path to war."

Wallace proposed instead the method of reciprocal trade—goods for goods. He said it led to peace and made no sales without providing opportunities for buyers to pay the bill.

"Since the bill does not remain outstanding indefinitely," he wrote, "and does not have to be collected at the point of a gun, it makes new business easy to get and profitable."
