MITCHELL BLAZES WAY FOR G. O. P.

ADDRESS STIRS UP LIVELY POLITICAL INTEREST IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, April 17 (UP)—Attorney General Mitchell was generally regarded in political circles here today as blazing the way for the 1932 republican campaign in his treatment of the two dominant issues of anti-trust laws and prohibition in his Minneapolis speech Wednesday night. His address, the first in a long time, stirred up lively political interest here particularly because of recent expressions of views on the same subjects by Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic National committee, to which Mitchell's speech was taken as an answer. The attorney general, who recently has instituted a series of suits against trade associations for alleged violations of the anti-trust laws, took particular pains to dispense any idea he is a "trust-buster," and assured business that his department plans no "unwarranted attacks" on it during this time of depression.

PROBERS SUMMON FIFTY WITNESSES

MANY REPORTS OF ASSERTED "POLICE PROTECTION" GIVEN TO GRAND JURY.

Minneapolis, April 17 (UP)—The special grand jury investigating charges of police protection of vice and liquor resorts today was reported preparing to summon 50 witnesses, many of whom were said to have offered their information.

Many reports of law violations and asserted "police protection" were said to have been given to the jury. It was indicated that the jurors would continue their policy of making raids on suspected vice resorts without the aid of police.

Among the officials who kept in close contact with the jury was John Wall, sheriff of Hennepin county. Wall's deputies have aided the jurors in making raids. Search for members of an alleged "collection ring" which preyed on illegal resorts was being continued.

Girl Considering Risky Marriage Should Not Think of Finances—Advice to Dolores
Dear Miss Vane: I am a girl not yet 18, and am engaged to a widower 20 years older than I am who has several children. Some of his children are as old as I am and they are all opposed to me. He has money and could give me a good home but friends advise me against the marriage since he did not treat his first wife well. Still he might do better with this marriage, I think. What shall I do?

M. A. A.
Altogether it looks like a bad matrimonial bet, and you'd be very wise to wait at least two years before making a decision. In that time you will probably change your ideas and opinions very much. And the chances are you'll find someone much more suitable to marry.

F. C. M.: It's quite true that Dolores might make her husband forget Jane whom he now loves more than anyone else in the world. But the chances are very much against it.

You tell me that you persuaded your wife to marry you, even though she knew you were still in love with someone else—and that you two have made a success of the marriage, even starting with that handicap.

But you're the exception to the general rule, and in advising Dolores one has to give her the best possible general advice. Perhaps she is so full of personality and charm, and good-humor and patience that she could make any man forget the girl he really loved. But don't forget that her man has known her for years and has steadily loved Jane and no one else for all that time.

Also in your case there was the favorable factor of absence to help along your marriage. You and your wife went far away from the other girl, to start your new home. It is far easier to forget when one is miles and miles away from one's idol. Dolores would have to live close to her rival, and know always in the dread that Jane might in the end prove too fascinating to resist.

Thank you for your letter. I shall send it on to Dolores. Your opinion will be interesting to her.
